

Contents

- 9 Part I: A thing of beauty — Goa's natural heritage
Goa's biodiversity, its ecological endowments and to an equal extent, its sociable people, all are being severely assaulted by ecologically destructive mining. This section introduces the astonishing beauties of the region being mined.
- 25 Mining in Goa — An historical perspective
- 26 Part II: Mine, mine, mine — Goa's new mantra of greed
The mining industry has been considered Goa's 'sacred cow': Others call it 'the backbone' of the Goan economy. The primitive nature of the mining operations will more easily break the ecological backbone of the State. This section looks closely at the principal actors on the mining front.
- 32 Part III: Wounds on the earth — the effects of mining
The effects of the large-scale mining operations are ubiquitous and pervasive. This sections shows — in pictures — the true horrors of mining operations in Goa, their impacts on Goa's ecosystems and people.
- 72 Part IV: The blame game — pinning the responsibility
Who are the individuals and departments responsible for the state of affairs? Can you help make them listen?
- 92 Stand up and be counted
Some guidance on a future course of action. Please try it for Goa's sake.